Mandatory Overtime Protections
- Enhanced protection for day-of rest regarding Mandatory Overtime
- True 10-hour Rest Period will now be measured after you work 4 or more hours of mandatory overtime.
  Once this takes place you will be allowed a 10-hour rest period from the end of the mandatory assignment.

- If the 10-hour rest period runs into your regular assigned shift you can stay at home and rest and receive straight time rate of pay for any hours at home during the 10-hour rest period, or you can waive the rest period and work the regular shift and be paid double time (2X) for all hours worked as part of the 10-hour rest period.
- If the 10-hour rest period runs into any Mandatory overtime assignment you can stay home and rest and receive no pay during the 10-hour rest period, or you can waive the rest period and work the mandatory assignment and be paid double time (2X) for all hours worked.
- If the 10-hour rest period runs into any Voluntary overtime assignment you can stay home and rest and receive no pay during the 10-hour rest period, or you can waive the rest period and work the voluntary assignment and be paid double time (2X) for all hours worked as part of the 10-hour rest period.
- If the 10-hour rest period runs into a scheduled Shift Trade, you can stay home and rest and receive no pay during the 10-hour rest period, or you can waive the rest period and work the scheduled Shift Swap and be paid double time (2X) for all hours worked as part of the 10-hour rest period.
- 32-hour monthly cap on Mandatory Overtime
- If an employee has 32 hours or more of voluntary overtime worked in a calendar quarter, the employee will have the option to refuse a mandatory assignment in a subsequent quarter, and have the ability to accrue up to three (3) refusals with no penalty. The only exceptions are: Monday through Sunday of Thanksgiving week, and December 16th through January 3rd.
- Union clarified existing language - employees are not required to work more than 8 hours MOT on their day off unless the company follows the terms and processes of the CBA in regards to assigning mandatory overtime and exhausts other possibilities before requiring someone to work more than 8 hours of mandatory overtime.
- Union clarified existing language - employees will not be required to work MOT during hours traded off.
